Hello to all my friends!

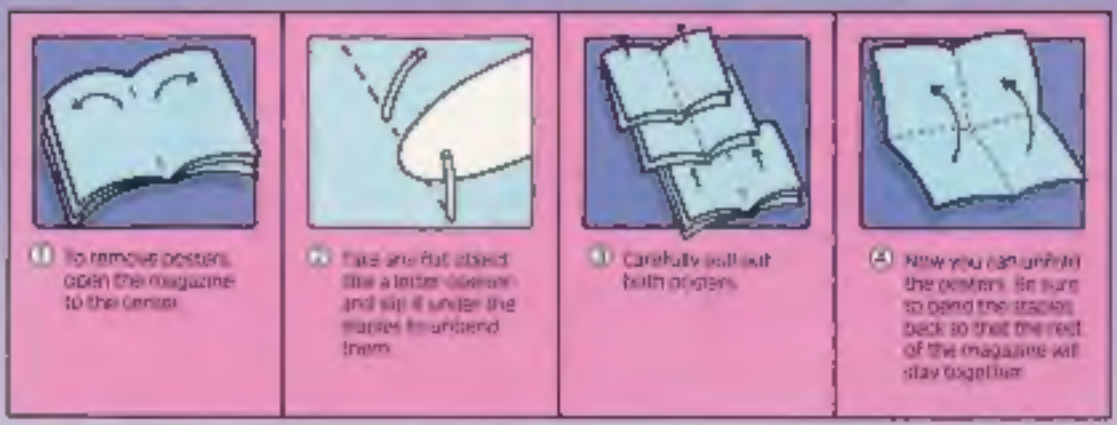
I'm delighted that you've joined us for all the fun and fantasy of SHE-RA PRINCESS OF POWER MAGAZINE. We're sure you're going to love our first issue!

I'm so happy that you'll meet my wonderful friends from Etheria and share in our exciting adventures. You'll find fantastic games and puzzles, and an enchanting story about Bow and Glimmer and me. And there are two terrific posters inside! To remove them, follow the safety instructions below.

Plus, there's news from your world. The Best of Winter brings you new books, TV shows, and movies to look for—holiday activities, too!

Be sure to write to me and let me know what you'd like to see in our next issue in March. Until then, we'll keep working . . . For the honor of Grayskull!

She-Ra



1 To remove posters, open the magazine to the center.
2 Take one flat object (like a letter opener) and slip it under the staples from end to end.
3 Carefully pull out both posters.
4 Now you can unfold the posters. Be sure to bend the staples back so that the rest of the magazine will stay together.

Dear She-Ra

Dear She-Ra,

Everyone in my class thinks you're great. I like horses a lot but I don't have a pink one like you do! I am ten years old.

Carol Beam
Dallas, Texas

Dear She-Ra,

I have blond hair just like you do. I am five years old and I take swimming lessons. My brother and sister and I like your posters very much. I drew this picture of your horse Spirit because he is such a pretty color.

Dear She-Ra,

I am one of your biggest fans. I am seven years old. You and your friends are very popular at my school. You are all very pretty and very powerful!

Charoni Dean
Fort Dodge, Iowa

Dear She-Ra,

My house is pink, just like Crystal Castle. I think Glimmer is beautiful and I like her purple hair. It's too bad Catra isn't friendlier because she is very pretty. I have told all of my friends about your magazine and the whole neighborhood is excited!

Vivienne Bartholy
Venice, Florida

Dear She-Ra,

I am eight years old and I have a dog named Rocky. He likes to play in the snow. I bet he'd love to play outside Frosta's ice palace! I can't wait to get more of your magazines.

Maria Matt
Cleveland, Ohio

Dear She-Ra,

I think it's really terrific when you transform from Adora into She-Ra. I like word puzzles and I like to write stories. Maybe I'll write one about you! I am eleven.

Dana Keith
Manteo, North Carolina

Dear She-Ra,

I wish you could come visit me on Earth. You could bring all of your friends with you! I am seven years old and I like you a lot.

Mary Ellis
Stone Harbor, New Jersey

Dear She-Ra,

I love to draw, so I drew a picture of you. I am eleven years old. I am a big fan of yours because you are so good to the people of Etheria. I hope you like my picture!

A Storm in Etheria

by Marie Butler-Knight

It was a beautiful day in the Whispering Woods. The air was warm and the sky was clear and blue. At Crystal Castle, Adora, Angella, and Glimmer groomed Spirit. The three beauties sparkled like jewels in the sun. Adora's long blonde hair glistened like gold. Angella's wings cast silvery shadows over her soft pink gown. And Glimmer shimmered in purple silk, with bands of purest silver along her sleeves.

They brushed Spirit's coat until it glistened. Then they wove flowers and ribbons in his mane and tail. Proud and happy, Spirit pranced around the Castle.

Soon Bow came by, looking splendid in his own new clothes, with a feather in his hat. "Spirit looks wonderful," he said. "Let me take him for a walk so everyone in Whispering Woods can see him."

"All right," agreed Adora and Glimmer. But don't let him get dirty. Promise?" Bow promised.

In the shadow of Whispering Woods, just beyond the Castle, Catra hid behind a tree. She spied on the happy friends, jealous of the fun they were having. At last she decided to play a trick on them. She put on her cat mask, then followed Bow and Spirit into Whispering Woods. With her mask on, she was quiet as a cat and almost invisible as she glided between the bushes and trees. She watched and waited for a chance to make mischief.

Spirit danced along beside Bow, lifting his hooves up high with each step. As they passed below a big oak tree, a low branch brushed some of the flowers from Spirit's mane. Bow stopped, set down his bow and quiver, and picked up the flowers.

Suddenly, Catra stepped out on the path. Pretending to be worried, she called to Bow, "Quick, Bow! Adora is in trouble! You must help her!" Bow turned and started to run back to Crystal Castle. Then he realized that Catra must be tricking him, for his heart was not pounding in his chest as it did whenever Adora was truly in danger. But by then it was too late. Catra grabbed his bow and arrows and ran with them through the woods.

Bow forgot his promise to Adora, Angella and Glimmer. He jumped on Spirit's back and raced after Catra. Through the bushes and under the trees, they chased her. But like a cat, Catra could slip down trails that were too narrow for Spirit. Finally, she led them into a tangle of brambly bushes. While they struggled to get out, Catra escaped.

With heavy hearts, Bow and Spirit returned to the Castle. They were tired, dirty and scratched. Spirit's mane and tail were matted and tangled and his coat was full of burrs and mud. Glimmer was outside waiting. When she saw Spirit, she was furious! "We worked so hard and you ruined it all!" she cried. "You're so irresponsible!"

Bow tried to explain, but Glimmer wouldn't listen. "I'm sorry, Glimmer," Bow said. "I'll groom Spirit again. I'll make him look as beautiful as he did before." Glimmer was still angry. "You have done enough for one day," she said sharply. "Now just go away and leave us alone."

Bow walked down the path into the Whispering Woods. His beautiful day was not so beautiful anymore. Even the sky was starting to cloud over. "It's not my fault," he muttered to himself. "It's that nasty Catra. And she still has my bow and arrows." Upset at the way things had turned out, he kicked at a stone along the path. But the stone was heavier than it looked and he hurt his toe. "Ouch!" he shouted, hopping and holding his foot. "Everything is going wrong!"

Meanwhile, Adora came out of the Castle and Glimmer told her what had happened. "Oh, Glimmer," said the gentle Adora, "I think you were too hard on poor Bow. I know you were worried about Spirit, but Bow is our friend, too. He must feel terrible." Glimmer's anger had already disappeared and now she felt sorry for the harsh words she had spoken. "I must go find Bow," she said. "I'll bring him back here and we can all be friends again." And she ran off into the woods, calling Bow's name.

Adora led Spirit to a little stream in the woods and washed the mud from his coat. Then they both rested in a little clearing, while Adora brushed and soothed the weary horse. Curled up on a tree branch high above them, Catra watched silently. She was very pleased with herself at the trouble she had caused.

Storm Spirit's head nodded and he fell asleep. "I think you should join your friend in dreamland, Adora," whispered Catra. Then neither of you will be at the Castle when Bow and Glimmer come back." She took some Sleep Potion from a pocket in Bow's quiver and poured it through the branches toward Adora. Adora instantly fell into a deep sleep with her head resting against Spirit's strong neck.

Catra laughed and laughed as she climbed back down the tree. As she worked her way through the thick branches, the quiver of arrows kept slipping over her shoulder. Pushing it back, Catra scratched her arm on Bow's love arrow. It was only a tiny scratch, but the love arrow was Bow's most powerful arrow, and soon Catra began to feel worried about Adora.

The wind was getting stronger. Bow and the woods grew darker and darker. A storm, the worst and greatest ever! But Catra was busy arguing with herself. "What's come over me?" Catra giggled. "I don't care what happens to that goody-goody Adora! Everyone else watches out for her, so why should I?" But as hard as she tried, Catra couldn't shake off her concern. Without thinking, she reached over and grabbed Adora's arm. "Wake up, Adora!" Catra cried. But the power of the Sleep Potion was too strong. "I'm not sure," Catra said. "I just don't understand what's happening to me." Overcome by frustration, Catra turned and ran into the woods, leaving Adora and Spirit asleep.

In the meantime, Bow and Glimmer had just reached their friends. Seeing the storm approaching, they were starting back to the Castle when Catra came racing through the woods. When she saw the two friends, she threw down the bow and quiver, shouting, "Well, now, what I wanted to see. Here's your archery kit, Bow. Now quick, go find Adora. She's in danger!" Without another word, she stomped back into the woods. Bow and Glimmer looked at each other, surprised by Catra's strange behavior. "I just don't know what to think. It's probably just another one of her tricks," Bow said. "You're right, Bow. When I left Adora, she was safe at the Castle," agreed Glimmer.

But suddenly, the air became very still, and the sky grew black as night. Bow's heart began to pound harder and harder. He heard a distant roar growing louder every second. A twister was coming! Bow knew instantly that Adora wasn't safe at all. She was in danger!

Glimmer just caught a glimpse of Bow as he raced back toward the Castle. Soon, Adora, Bow, Glimmer, and Spirit were reunited. Adora was still fast asleep, but Spirit had awakened and was watching nervously over her. Bow quickly took some Sleep Potion and sprinkled it on Adora. Instantly, she was awake. "I'm not sure I agree," she said.

"Not quite, Adora," Bow replied. "But hurry! We've got to get back to the Castle! A twister is coming our way!"

[illegible]

[illegible] flash. Adora became the power of She-Ra and Spirit became the winged unicorn Swift Wind. As the twister stood still, he flew down and down to the ground. She-Ra and Swift Wind flew up into the sky. They circled the funnel faster and faster, reversing its opposite wind and forcing the twister to unwind itself. Finally, they had turned the whipping winds and the storm faded away into the sky. "Looks like we knocked the wind out of that one," She-Ra said as she patted Swift Wind's neck.

As they landed, the woodland creatures came scurrying toward the heroes to thank them for saving the Whispering Woods. Since She-Ra could communicate easily with the animals, she knew how happy they were that their homes were saved. "I'm relieved that," She-Ra said to a fuzzy chipmunk who had approached her. "I love Whispering Woods and would do anything to keep it free from danger. But now that we've solved this storm problem, I have to go help in another little storm." She-Ra and Swift Wind said good-bye and flew away toward Crystal Castle, leaving Adora and Spirit on the way.

Back at Crystal Castle, Glimmer and Bow were talking when they picked up some branches that the wind had blown down. Adora saw them and said, "I'm glad to see that you two are friends again."

"I was wrong to be angry with Bow," Glimmer said. "But next time I'll be more understanding."

"And I was wrong to break a promise," Bow added. "But we've made up now."

Adora smiled and said, "I'm glad you've both realized the importance of friendship. Friends make one happier in many, many ways. In fact, I love going to parties with my friends. And now that the sun is shining, how about one right now?"

"Great idea!" Bow replied. "Let's go!"

The End

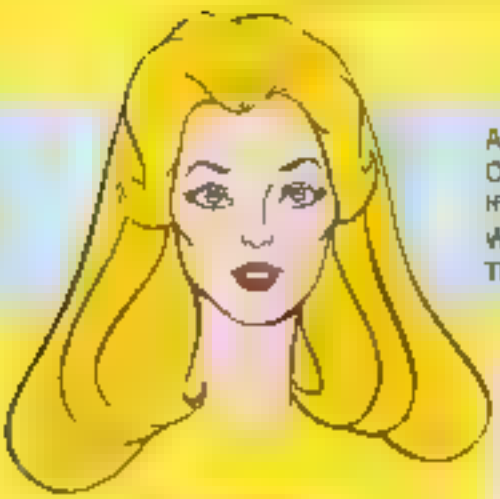
Hi! I'm Lele. Kee. Did you find me in the story? I was watching as Angella, Glimmer and Adora were grooming Spirit. Take a look. You know, Adora gave us something to think about in this story. Friends are important. They make each day a little brighter for a lot of us. So remember that next time you're with your friends. Life wouldn't be as much fun without them.

So long.

Magic Literature

Clever Kowl loves rhymes, especially limericks. Limericks have five lines, arranged in a specific pattern. The first, second and fifth lines share the same rhyme, and the third and fourth lines rhyme with each other. Also, limericks have a unique rhythmic sound. If you say them out loud, you are sure to get the beat.

Here are some limericks that Kowl wrote about his fellow She-Ra characters.



Adora has beauty and might
On Spirit, she is quite a sight
If anything's wrong
When she comes along,
Then She-Ra makes everything right

And then there is Glimmer, the guide
From her powers of light, you can't hide
At Bright Moon she's found
Scouting around
We're glad Glimmer's here on our side

Bow is a fellow who's quick
His arrows do many a trick
If Adora's in trouble
He's there on the double
As a friend, Bow's the one we all pick

It's Catra we'd change if we could
She doesn't behave as she should
She's jealous, you see
Of others' beauty
And that makes her seem not so good

Now it's your turn to make up a limerick. Kowl started this one. See if you can finish it.

I've written these limericks for you
Now there's something Kowl wants you to do
Just do your best
And finish the rest

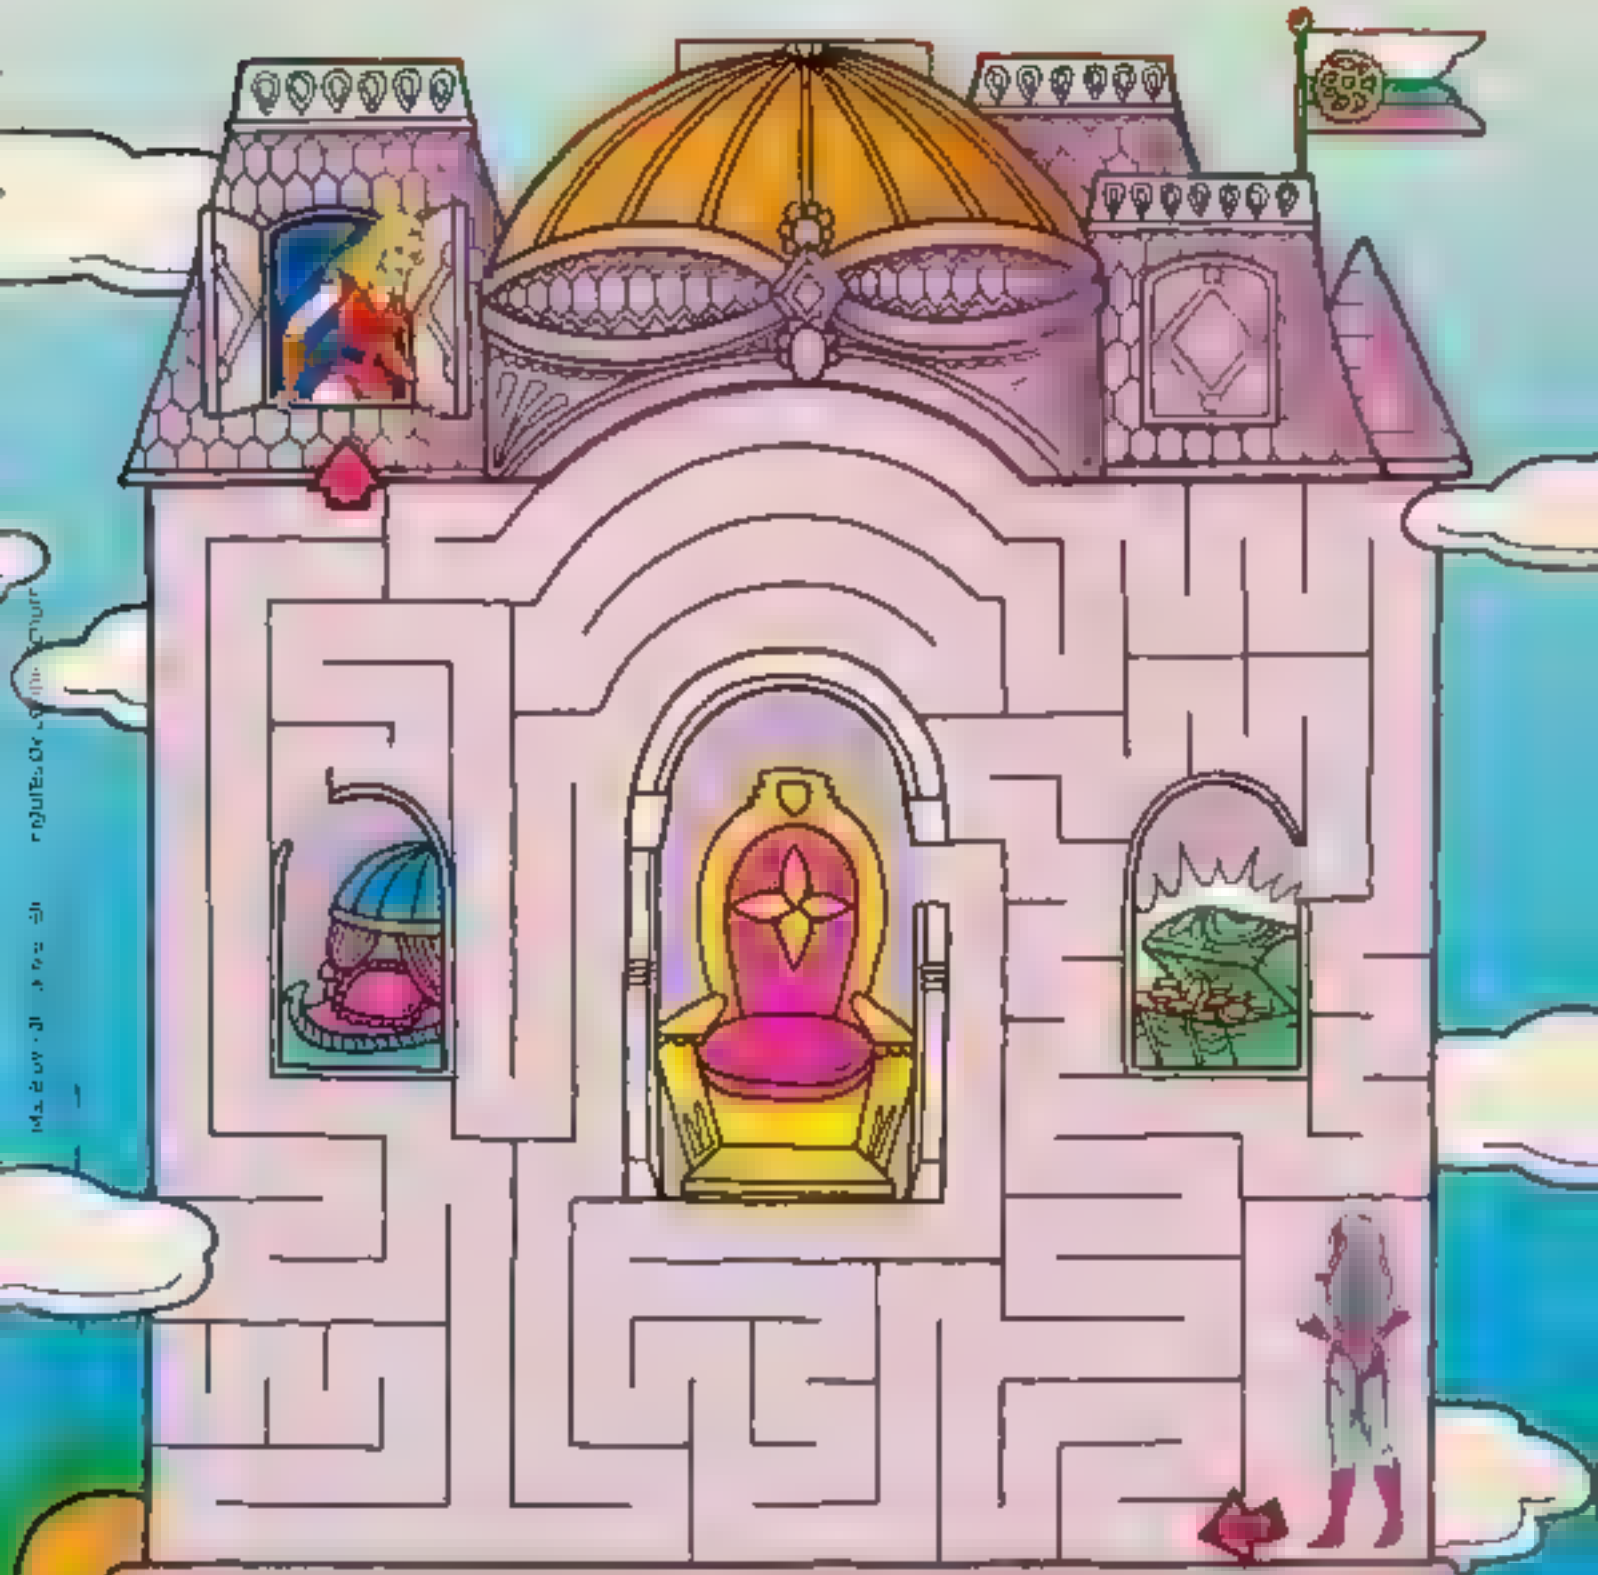
(You fill in this line. Make it rhyme with 'you' and 'do')

Now try writing some of your own limericks!

CRYSTAL CASTLE MAZE



As the sun began to set over Crystal Castle, Adora watched from her terrace. Glimmer came to dinner for the breathtaking view, and Adora shouted down to her, "Hurry, Glimmer. The sky is especially colorful tonight. Take the short cut up to the terrace."

But Glimmer couldn't remember all the twists and turns on her way through the Castle. Help Glimmer find her way to the terrace—quickly, before the sun sets.

MAKE-A-FLAKE

Paper snowflakes make wonderful holiday decorations. Ask an adult to help you follow these instructions to design your own winter wonders.

1 Take a square piece of paper and fold it in half, matching A with B to make a triangle.

2 Fold the triangle in half again, matching E with D, making another triangle.

3 Then fold it again, matching E with F, to form another triangle.

4 Following the diagram, use sturdy scissors to cut out your snowflake. The red lines show one possible pattern you might cut. But try your own designs, too. Unfold the paper very carefully and you'll find you've created a snowflake masterpiece.

LONG NIGHTS, SHORT DAYS

In the Northern Hemisphere, Winter begins on December 21. On that day, known as the Winter Solstice, the earth is tilted so that the North Pole is as far away from the sun as it ever gets. That means that it's the longest night and the shortest day of the whole year! But don't worry, you won't get caught in the dark. After the Winter Solstice, the days get longer and longer.

WINGED RESCUE

Glimmer and Frosta had been hiking in the mountains all day. At the very top of the highest peak they stopped to rest. "I'm so tired!" Glimmer said. "I wish we had wings so that we could fly home."

Suddenly they heard a great whoosh overhead. "Your wish has come true, Glimmer!" Frosta said as she pointed toward the sky. "Look who's here!"

Sure enough, one of their winged friends had come to take them home. To find out who rescued Frosta and Glimmer, connect the dots, starting at number 1.

WINTER PRINCESS OF POWER

Kelly Michelle of Brookline, Massachusetts is our Winter Princess of Power. Kelly has combined two of her interests: sports and radio, into one incredible job. She works for a radio station as their Sports Director—the youngest Sports Director in the country.

Every Monday morning before school, Kelly calls in her sports report to the "Joe and Andy" show on WROR-FM, a top station in Boston. Her weekend sports wrap-up includes scores of both local and national events, and she also provides her own colorful commentary on the teams. Kelly's knowledge of sports and her terrific sense of humor make her a favorite of her listeners.

Though Kelly enjoys broadcasting, she's not sure if she wants to make a full-time career of it. She's very interested in animals, so being a veterinarian is a possibility, too.

Congratulations to Kelly for her success on WROR. And if you're ever near Boston, tune in to Kelly's sports report.
